"Rocky Mountain Memories" (introduced by Leslie Shores)

This program provides the public an opportunity to talk to archivists about their family papers, scrapbooks, diaries, letters, photographs, and other archival materials of personal value, with the goal of better understanding historical value and the preservation options available to people for their objects. Archivists explain basic preservation techniques, how collections are donated and what happens to collections at archival repositories. The goal is to help people better understand how to care for their treasures and how archives and archivists can help them achieve these goals.

"The Role of Archives in Standards-Based Education"

Fred Edison is a Social Studies teacher at Douglas County High School in Castle Rock, CO.
